

But there is also the look of joy and peace and healing for those who will look unto Him who bore their sin.

Miller & the hymn "In the hour of death"
 "Ally" no Sir John Bowring Early Bowring's claims, hills of Marise, Elmer on the east & all a massive Cathedral - a vibrant typology nearly unaltered. On looking, only the main part was remained intact. On the summit of the West stands a great strong tower, defining the stream.

Si John ~~bowring~~ Bowring Amer. governor
 I strongly would Marise in 1825-26 was improved by not by light case which seemed to shy the navigation. & time & storm.
 in the case of x & going

Two rings one the middle & time,
 All the type & second story patterns round its head outside towards home visited & looked upon God same ruin & case - some with indifference, measure, curiosity

No. Nov. 22, 1853, P.M. (1)

And as we think of the Jews today in their denial of Christ's deity, hostile to His claims, contemptuous for His cross, saying that Christ has not the marks of the Messiah, the story of the cross moves Him to silence. Put in all of history we see that it is touched upon. Literature tries to tell the story, art tries to portray it to the minds of men, music tries to move men. There is a story told of a recital of music in a great hall. On the program was a young girl who was very talented. And she sang her first song on the program as a pupil. Her fresh voice and her art and the wonder of her voice captivated the audience. They wanted her to sing again but she was not prepared to sing another number. She was at a loss as to what to sing. But she came back and she chose a song dear to her heart. Wyatt's famous hymn, "When I Survey the Wonderful Cross" on which the Prince of Glory, my richest gain I count but loss, and pour contempt on all my pride." They listened in silence. A thrill of rapture passed over them and people were not given to flipent speech but to tenderness and strong men looked straight and little children wept. The whole company was led back to the cross. They looked upon Him who they pierced with sympathy. There was also a look of, (penitence). When we think of those who shall look upon Him who has been pierced like the morning dew there are many who